Weathering

Weathering:
The breakdown of rock at or near the earth's surface by natural forces.

WIND Wind carries sand. As the sand blows against rock, it weathers it down like sandpaper.	WATER Waves carry sand and pebbles. As this sediment hits rock, it weathers it down.
ICE 1. Water seeps into cracks of rocks. 2. The water freezes and expands. 3. This breaks rocks apart.	PLANTS Plant roots grow into the cracks of a rock and pry the rocks apart.

1. Match

WEATHERING EROSION DEPOSITION

2. Directions: Read the statements and classified each process as weathering, erosion and deposition. Write the letter that is associated with it into the box that corresponds.

- A. Water getting into cracks, freezing, and breaking the rocks.
- B. Wind blowing sand from one place to another.
- C. Muddy water being transported by a fast-moving river
- D. Flood waters moving soil from one location to another.
- E. Glaciers dropping rock and sand to other places.
- F. Waves dropping sand to the beach.
- G. Rainwater carrying away water from a hill.
- H. Sand dunes forming at the desert.
- I. Raindrops on some rocks making them wear down.

Here we see the processes acting of weathering, erosion and deposition working together.

Weathering and Erosion

Sort the actions into the correct column.

waves moving sand along the beach	the breaking down of rocks
changing rock to sediment	ice causing cracks in the sidewalk as it melts and freezes
mountain top slowly becoming more rounded	river carrying sediment to a new location
changes Earth's surface	wind blowing desert sand

Loading... Weathering, erosion, and deposition are processes that act together to wear down and build up the Earth's surface. These processes have occurred over billions of years. Weathering is any process that breaks down rocks and creates sediments. There are two forces of weathering, chemical and mechanical (physical). Chemical weathering is decomposition of rock caused by chemical reactions resulting in formation of new compound. Mechanical (physical) weathering is the breakdown of rock into smaller pieces. Erosion is the process by which natural forces move weathered rock and soil from one place to another. Gravity, running water, glaciers, waves, and wind all cause erosion. The material moved by erosion is sediment. Deposition occurs when the agents (wind or water) of erosion lay down sediment. Deposition changes the shape of the land. Erosion, weathering, and deposition are at work everywhere on Earth. Gravity pulls everything toward the center of Earth causing rock and other materials to move downhill. Water's movements (both on land and underground) cause weathering and erosion, which change the land's surface features and create underground formations. The effects of these processes are as follows: Changes in shape, size, and texture of land-forms (i.e. mountains, riverbeds, and beaches) Landslides Buildings, statues, and roads wearing away Soil formation Washes soil, pollutants, harmful sediments into waterways Causes metals to rust Reduces beaches, shorelines Delta formation Formation of various new landforms For as long as the Earth has existed, weathering has helped shape the landscape. Weathering wears away rocks and soil. Water is often the main cause of weathering, either as rain or ice. Rainwater can easily enter cracks in rocks or sidewalks. If this happens during cold months, the water may freeze and expand in the crack. Working as a wedge, the ice splits the rock. Many times, road crews have to patch up potholes caused by weathering from ice. Wind can also cause weathering. Over long periods of time, wind can wear away rock and carry tiny pieces of the rock to new places. This can create amazing landscapes, such as rocks that look like mushrooms. Sometimes living things can cause weathering. Plant roots can wedge their way in between small cracks in rocks. As the plant grows, the roots increase the size of the crack little by little. Eventually, pieces of the rocks break off and get carried away by wind or water.
